Win Provides Dog, Hot Dogs

The Graham Pitzenbergers, of Appomattox, have both a dog and the hot dogs, following their win of $20 at West End Market. Because they had the lucky number, they felt that their savings on groceries for one week warranted the purchase of a new dog. (Their last pet was run over by a car.) Now they have a Dalmatian puppy and the pleasure of slashing away a load of groceries FREE at West End. Last week the lucky number was 744, but no one claimed the $20 win. Today, Thursday, the total goes up to $30 for some lucky number holder. Check the West End advertisement for full details.

Vera Holds Melon Feast For 100

More than 100 showed up in Vera Tuesday night, Sept. 3, for what they hope may become an annual occasion. Harold Kaupe, service station and store operator and Mrs. Kaupe held an outdoor watermelon feast. Congressman Watt Abbitt and Mrs. Abbitt were there, plus dozens of oldsters and youngsters enjoying the melons. Kaupe, the host, said that his watermelon patch failed to yield as many melons as he thought he would need— so neighbors and friends raided their own melon patches, and the whole affair was a "sweet success". According to one report, even the rinds weren't wasted— and there'll be a lot more watermelon rind preserves in Vera this winter.

God Knows Why

Lesson for September 8, 1963

When we wonder why something should happen we think ought not to happen; when s burden long borne becomes daily harder to bear; when a good man goes down in defeat or a bad man prospers, in short, when it looks almost as if the devil and not God were in charge here; when we wonder why, we are directly expressing our faith in God. All Christians, and some who have never taken that name, do believe in a God who is both good and almighty. If He were only good but not almighty, or only almighty and not good, we would not wonder at all. It is only those who believe in the true God who wonder why.

The Story Of Joseph

The story of Joseph in the Old Testament hasn't a miracle in it. Joseph never performed one. He never saw any one else do it. Yet the story of Joseph gives us some of the most important clues to the way God takes care of His own, and brings His purposes to pass even with the help of those who are reckless and wicked. It helps us when we wonder "Why?" to read again this famous story and to think about it.

Joseph's brothers were a bad lot, there is no doubt about that. You cannot blame Jacob for playing favorites when he picked out Joseph for special favors. Joseph was the son of the only wife Jacob ever loved; and besides, he was not only better, he was smarter than the rest of the family. Anybody who is smarter than the people around him doesn't help matters by bragging, and Joseph did brag. Even in his dreams he was the kingpin and he let everybody know it. His brothers might have been expected to resent this and to pick on Joseph, maybe even beat him. But they did worse than that, they thought beating was too good for him, and plotted to murder him. Brothers don't come any lower down than that.

"You Meant Evil"

Those men without a conscience did not succeed in their brother after all. But that was not because they thought better of it. If anything, what they did was worse than killing: they sold him for a slave. Instead of a swift death, their brother would have a long lingering death-in-life, the miserable existence of a slave in those days when a slave's life was worth but little. The only reason they didn't kill Joseph was that they could make a little money about two dollars each) by selling him. The lie they told their father about it, or rather the lie they acted out, was all of a piece with the rest of it. There was a shred of good in the intentions of those ruffians. Furthermore, there was no good in the Midianite slave traders, and there was no good in the slave trade. When Potiphar bought Joseph, he didn't do so from motives of charity. It was purely a business transaction. Years and years after this, Joseph said to his erring brothers, speaking of these same events, "You meant evil against me." (Gen. 50:20) But God Meant It For Good

In the same sentence, hardly stopping for breath, the boy Joseph now a middle-aged experienced man, went on to say, "but God meant it for good." At the time of that wicked sale of Joseph to the wandering traders, it would have been no wonder if Joseph had been "wondering why . . . ." Why didn't God stop this terrible thing? We can imagine that on the way to Egypt (some days' journey at best) a bright 17 year-old like Joseph might have plotted an escape: and if he had tried it (maybe he did, at that; you would have surely been hoping he could manage the breakaway. But no. It was not to be. The whole future of the nation of Israel depended on Joseph's being sold into Egypt. Indeed one may say that all history depended on it. If he had broken away, and gone home, there would have been nowhere for the big famine to have struck. The Israelites would never have found stored-up grain in Egypt, and never would have found protection there, there would never have been an Exodus, a Moses, a David . . . Never a Mary and never the other Joseph. Never a babe in the manger at Bethlehem, never a Cross, a Resurrection, a Good News. What would have happened to the world? It is too dark to think about; but try to imagine what this world would be if there never had been a Christ nor any Christians. Surely "God meant it for good."

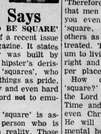
Pastor Says



LET'S DARE TO BE SQUARE'

This is the title of a recent issue in a national magazine. It states that this country was built by men who in the hipster's derisive term, were 'squares', who believed in such things as pride, patriotism, loyalty and even hard work. Can we afford not to emulate them?

Today being a 'square' is associated with a person who is out of touch with reality. Those 'oddballs' who become the wet blanket on every social occasion and joy - killers at every gathering.

But some fifty years ago a square was a person who was honest, trustworthy, and a straight shooter. One whose word was his bond. This recalls an experience I had with my hometown jeweler. I went in to purchase for my prospective bride an engagement and wedding ring. Not having sufficient funds to pay the bill, I asked for credit. The jeweler agreed. Reaching for a pen to sign a credit memorandum, I was surprised when he said, 'I don't issue credit cards. I trust you to pay the bill.' This amazed me, for he in reality was saying to me, 'I trust you, you are honest, you are a square. You are honest and dependable.'

The Early Church, in choosing the first seven men to assist in the affairs, selected men of 'honest report.' (Acts 6:3) They chose 'squares.'

A lot of people have gotten hold of this honest and wholesome word and bent it out of shape. Now everybody knows who a square is. He is a man who has never learned to 'get away with it.' A Joe who volunteers when he doesn't have to. A fellow who gets a thrill out of trying to do something better. A poor fellow who gets so lost in his work, that he has to be reminded when quitting time comes. And a 'slob' who chokes up when the band plays 'The Star Spangled Banner.' These squares don't fit too well into the current groups of cagey players, sharpshooters and these 'good - offs'. These are so burdened down with old fashioned honesty, loyalty and courage, they may be on their way to extinction. They, we say, are living under the old antiquated rules of society. We are led - date folks who live on the angles and Madison Avenue pattern of life.

But in the face of this current concept of a 'square' we must know that life cannot be lived without discipline. Our Museums are exhibiting paintings by so-called artist who never learned to paint. There are artist in most every field who just 'became' artist. No! Don't you believe a word of this!

It may be true that some through maneuvering have reach the top. But to stay there they must join this 'square' gang. They must learn common honesty and decency and loyalty.

Patrick Henry once said, 'Sure I am for liberty. But we've got to be a little realistic. We're a pretty small outfit. If we start pushing the British around, some one is going to get hurt.'

Jesus said in Matt. 7:12, 'Therefore all things whosoever that men should do unto you, do you even unto them.' Be a 'square, shoot straight, treat others as you would want to be treated. This will restore decorum to living. It will help to place right and truth back in its proper place.

How can we become a 'square?' Let the Lord of Life, the Lord of Death, the Lord of Time and the Lord of Eternity, even Christ, be in your heart. He will give heart power and mental honesty to life. Will you support the church of your choice? They are committed to putting these elements into living.
